THE FROST-BOLLES ARMS

(Nicholas Frost Esq.)

97-86

Foreword

The place of origin of Nicholas Frost has not been determined and no exhaustive search for it has yet been made in England. Two family Bibles giving records of early Frosts are extant; the records from one of these and from one other Bible, not located, have been published. One Bible record (New England Historical and Genealogical Register, July 1907) traces an erroneous connection with an English family of Bolles with whom the Frosts were more distantly connected by marriage; otherwise, this record seems to be correct. Another Bible record (Old Eliot, November 1897), giving English antecedents of Nicholas Frost, states ages clashing with ages given in depositions. The early records in this Bible were entered at a later date but may in part represent a valid tradition. Several writers have pointed out their errors with various explanations (John R. Bolles, Rev. Everett S. Stackpole, Charles Thornton Libby). This Bible record states that Nicholas Frost's family originated at Cornbre Hill, Cornwall, and came from Tiverton in Devonshire to America. The tradition that Nicholas Frost came from Devonshire is a strong one in the family. The late Col. Charles Edward Banks located several contemporaries of the emigrant by that name in Devonshire but his identification of the emigrant is not authenticated by his material. The name was a relatively common one in Devonshire at that time.

In 1687, the son of Nicholas Frost, emigrant, died in England and was buried at St. Peter's Parish, Isle of Thanet. No research for the Frost connection has been attempted there.

The arms used on the seal of Nicholas Frost's grandson are those which Burke ascribes to Frost of Yorkshire.

The Frost-Bolles arms owned by Nicholas Frost, Esq., of Laconia, N. H., (painted on parchment and reproduced in this book from a photograph) are said to have belonged to the first Major Charles Frost and certainly were in the possession of his son, Hon. John Frost. In 1702, five years after the death of his father and two years prior to that of his mother, Maj. Charles Frost, Jr., grandson of the emigrant, used a seal on state papers (now at York County Court House, Alfred, Maine) bearing the impaled arms of Frost and Bolles. Maj. Charles Frost, Jr., was made justice of the peace, April 24, 1719, and, in 1721, as Charles Frost, J. P., again sealed with the Frost-Bolles arms. His cousin, Charles Frost of Boston, son of Capt. John Frost who died in England, used the same Frost arms impaled with those of Davis, his mother's family, his use of them being registered in the Gore Roll of Arms, 1707.

The Nicholas Frost Family

Nicholas Frost first appears in America in 1632; how long he had been in America at that time it is impossible to ascertain. He was probably born between the years 1592 and 1598 as he states in depositions that he was sixty years of age in June 1658 and seventy in April 1662. No reliable records, other than depositions, have been found concerning his family, and even the name of his wife is unknown. He was a mason by profession although most of the large property which passed to his heirs was granted to him for the active part he took in the government and life of the settlement at Kittery. Before his arrival in Kittery he had been in America two years at least. On October 3, 1632, he appeared in the Boston court for compromising the English by misusing the natives at Damariscove. He was banished from the province. Around 1634 or 1635, he was given land in Kittery (now Eliot, Maine) by Thomas Wannerton, as we learn from the following record:

"Philip Swadden aged seauenty years or yr abouts, testifyeth & sayth, that about thyrty eight or thyrty nine yeares since, lieuing then at pichataqua do pisitiuely know, yt Mr. Thomas Wannerton gaue to Nicholas Frost a Preell of Land vp in Piscataqua River, now known by the name of Kittery which peell of Land was bounded, on the East with a little Coue Joyneing to the Fort Poynt, on the South West on the River, on the North West Nertherly, with a great stumpe called the Mantilltree stumpe; which is about the Middle of the Lane, wch Joynes to ye Land which Major Nicho: Shapleigh now possesseth, & soe running into ye woods, so fare backe as the sayd Wannertons Land went, which tract of Land Mr. Thomas

Wannerton gaue to the sayd Nicholas Frost to come to bee his Neighbor/ & further sayth not/

The house of Nicholas Frost was located at the upper end of the lane that ran down to the ferry across the Piscataqua River. This property of Nicholas passed to his son-in-law, William Leighton. The spot is marked today by a tablet commemorating the signing of the separation of Maine from Massachusetts at the Everett Tavern which probably stood on the exact site of the home of Nicholas Frost. The property is on the River Road in Eliot, Maine, and is today owned by Lanier Camp.

The River Road in Eliot dates from the time of Nicholas Frost as Stackpole points out in his history of Kittery:

"John White in 1679 testified that forty-two years before, or about 1637, 'Mr. Alexander Shapleigh and Mr. James Treworgy did agree with the neighbors dwelling at and about Sturgeon Creek that there should be alwayes a high way from Nicholas ffrosts house down to Sturgeon Creek and Soe along to the Ceaders And the Said high way hath bin held ever Since without Interruption'." (Stackpole, Rev. Everett S. Old Kittery and Her Families, pp. 168-9, Lewiston Journal Company, Lewiston, 1903).

When Nicholas Frost first settled in Kittery in 1634 he was at the time father of two children. Whether he had brought his wife and children with him we do not know. His position in the colony, however, became more secure after 1643 when the decree of banishment against him was removed upon his second petition. This was a formal acceptance of what must have been evidently established by custom since in 1640 he had been appointed Constable by the General Court in a meeting held at Saco.

But little can be learned of the character of Nicholas Frost since records of his time are scarce. Charles Thornton Libby says of him: "An efficient and aggressive man he laid the foundation of this family's fortune." (Libby, Genealogical Dictionary of Maine and New Hampshire, v. II, p. 247.) An interesting instance of his generosity is found in the depositions of Thomas Beard and John Whit sworn October 14, 1645:

" . . . to call John Heard to come to him into the marsh, and ther was Nicholas Frost & John Whit, John Marten & myselfe, and sayd to these men, come what should wee have difference about marsh, wee will devid it and live like neighbors, then he said to Nicholas Frost from this bancke home to the Burch tree shall be yours. Nicholas Frost sayd I will not have so much, I will come but to this bush . . . " (Maine Province and Court Records, vol. I, pp. 94-5)

In 1649 Nicholas Frost leased his new house in Kittery. This may have been the house which tradition says he had erected in 1640. The terms of lease are:

"Articles of agrement betwixt Nicholas Frost of the one part and Jeremy Sheires on the other part the 30th of march, 1649.

Memorandum that I, Nicholas Frost, doeth covenant, let and set unto Jeremy Sheires his new Howse and ground at Kittery with all the appurtenances there unto belonging for the full tearme & end of seaven yeares to be compleat & ended: and also the sayd Nicholas doeth covenant with the sayd Jeremy that hee will build him a suffitient backe of a Chimney with stone & a suffitient latted chimney upward, with an oven in it.

For and in consideration that the sayd Jeremy is for to bring all the stufe in place & a man to attend him, and the sayd Jeremy or his assignes to leave unto the sayd Nicholas Frost his Heires or assignes the sayd howse and ground Tennanttable at the end and tearme above sayd & the sayd Jeremy is for to take in all the ground backward so fare as the postes make mention.

And also the sayd Nicholas is for to let the sayd Jeremy have so many boards as doeth come to thirty three shillings fore pence.

In Witness where of we have hereunto sett our hands and seales the daye and yeare above written enterchangably.

This is a trew coppy of the originall taken per me.

(Maine Province and Court Records, I, 130)

Most of the property of Nicholas Frost was acquired during the 1650's. This was also the most active period of his life in local government. He was a member of the jury in 1647, 1659, and 1662. Nicholas Frost was selectman of Kittery in 1648, 1652-3, and 1661. He was a commissioner on the Kittery-York boundary in 1653, and on the Kittery-Dover boundary in 1654.

Charles Thornton Libby has compiled a list of early documents which include Nicholas Frost's name:

(1) Inhabitants who did and those who did not attend Saco court 25 June 1640 (Me. Prov. and Court Rec., i, 42)

(2) Submission to Massachusetts, Nov. 1652 (Stackpole, Kittery, pp. 143-4)

(3) Petition against Richard Leader, Dec. 1652 (Documentary History, iv, 45, and Massachusetts Archives iii, 208)

(4) Petition to the Lord Protector, 1657 (Documentary History, iv, 140)

(5) Petition from Maine for Massachusetts to use force, not merely declarative acts to protect the inhabitants against a pretended power of Esq. Gorges' Commissioners (Fall of 1662) (Massachusetts Archives, 3:269, and Maine Province and Court Records, i, 199)

(6) Land Grants in Kittery and to Whom Laid Out. Abridged from a ledger account made for the Proprietors in 1764. Original, Maine Historical Society, Portland.

1652. To Nicholas Frost, 200; stated at Sturgeon Creek.

1652. To Nicholas Frost, 100; stated at Thompson's Point.

Nicholas Frost died in or before 1663 as on that date the question of the disposition of his property arose. Full inventory was presented to the court by his son Charles:

MAJOR CHARLES FROST, b 1631-3 (c. 52 in 1683); as a youth he became involved in a court case as the result of shooting Warwick Heard. This incident (occurring Mar. 24, 1646) was described by him:

"Charles Frost sayeth that he being about his father's door, looking into the marsh, saw three geese light in the marsh, as he thought, by a little puddle of water; and he taking a piece ran down into the marsh to get a shot at them; and he coming there, crept along on his belly. Warwick Heard seeing the same three geese light, and being crept into the bush and long grass before him, he not knowing him to be there, and it being after sunset, Warwick Heard being upon his knees ready to give fire, and the wind blowing the skirts of his jacket abroad, Charles Frost lifting up his head, as he was creeping, thought it to be a goose picking herself, presently gave fire and so shot him." The Coroner's Jury which was composed of John Spencer, Thomas Spencer, James Bowker, Edward Smale, Abraham Conley, Thomas Jones, John Meridaugh, Thomas Doustan, and Thomas Beard, returned a verdict of not guilty; this verdict was confirmed by the higher court.

In the following year, 1647, Charles Frost was enrolled as a soldier in the protection of the frontier from Indian raids. On December 16, 1652, he was granted 100 acres of land at Thompson's Point, one-half of which he sold twelve years later to the Oliver brothers. In 1653 he was chosen by the court one of the committee for building the meeting house. In 1660 he was granted 100 acres of land at Stony Brook, which property is still held in the family. It was located in Kittery (now Eliot) and lay next to the York boundary. This estate is now known as Frost Garrisons although in the oldest records it was referred to as the Stony Brook Farm. Charles Frost lived in the Frost Garrison erected by his father on land now owned by a descendant, Moses Newbury Paul, Jr., in Eliot, Maine. It stood in the field across Goodwin Road in Eliot from the house now owned by Mr. Charles Frosst of Montreal. In 1756 the garrison house was vacated by the family who moved into a house on whose site is now Mr. Charles Frosst's house. By 1657, Charles Frost was lieutenant and grand juror. After that time he was active in all military matters connected with the province except when it was under the Royal Commissioners. He was executor for his father's estate in 1663 under bonds of £1000. When Maine again became a part of Massachusetts Charles Frost was commissioned captain under date of July 6, 1668, and a magistrate authorized to preside at the Associates Courts. During King Philip's War he had charge of the garrison at Sturgeon Creek, that section of Kittery which is now Eliot. At this time he wrote to Maj. Richard Waldron at Dover for permission to garrison his own house. Major Waldron's reply was:

"Capt. Frost and Sergent Neall.

Gentlemen: I thought to have met you Here at major Shapley's but enderstanding the guns were herd about Stargeon Creek, it is well for you tooke your march as you did--my desire and order is that you garrison your owne house with ten men, and doe your beste now the snow is upon the grond, which will be advantage upon ther tracks. Your letter I resved about garrisoning your house. We have a party of men upon your Side commanded by goodman banmore; and John Wingut and Joseph Fild are going out this night; and in case you want men, goe to the garrison above and especially samon faul, and take men for any expedition; and all the commanders of the garrisons are hereby required to Atend your order Herein and this shall be your suficiant warrent.

dated this 8 nomber, 1675, about 3 o'clock.

Your Servant Richard Waldron
Sergent major.

I intend god willing to be at nachwanack to morrow moining, thefor would dasier to her from you. R. W."

The death of King Philip in 1676 ended the war and in September of 1676 occurred the sham battle at Dover. Waldron and Frost had invited there a large number of Indians for a peaceful conference including a friendly sham battle. During the battle the Indians were surrounded and taken prisoners. Most of them were sold into slavery and shipped to the Barbadoes. This act the Indians never forgave and for it Waldron and Frost paid with their lives. A more complete account of this incident is given in Drake's Border Wars of New England.

HON. JOHN FROST

(Hon. George Frost Estate)

In 1682 President Danforth appointed Frost Councillor for six years; he was a Judge of the Common Pleas Court from 1692 until his death. King William's War commenced in the summer of 1688, and Frost was made Sergeant-Major for Maine in command of all the troops of that district. In April 1689 the Indians captured Dover, N. H., killing 23 persons and taking 29 captive. Waldron was killed only after awful torture, and the destruction of his home followed. Captain Frost's commission given by President Danforth in August 1689 reads:

"The President of the Province of Mayne in New England.
To Major Charles Frost

Whereas you are appointed Sergt. Major of the military fforces in the Province. These are in their Majesties name to authorize and require you to take into your care and conduct the said military forces, and diligently to intend that service as Sergent Major, by Governing and exercising the military forces of said Province as the Law directeth. Commanding the Militia of said Province that they observe and obey all such orders as from time to time you shall receive from the president or other superior authority.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto put my hand and seal the 23d day of August in the year 1689, Annoque R.R. et Regina Willielmi et Mariae Angelica primo.

Thomas Danforth, President."

Despite Major Frost's military genius in defending this scattered frontier, 450 persons had been killed and 250 taken prisoners from the region east of the Piscataqua by the end of the war. Wells and Piscataqua were the only settlements left standing in the Province of Maine. Most of the more remote settlements had disbanded and the people moved away but many of them had been burned to the ground by the Indians. Major Frost continued his military service until 1693 when he was chosen a member of the council of the governor of Massachusetts, and even then he guarded the forts and garrisons about Kittery between Council sessions; during this time he still remained in charge of scouts in the section. He had taken an interest in the civil affairs as well as the military for a number of years, having been Representative in 1660, 1661, 1669, 1674, 1678, Town Clerk after 1669, and many times Selectman of Kittery.

On Sunday, July 4, 1697, Major Frost and his wife and two sons, with John Heard and his wife and Dennis Downing, were returning from Church at Quamhegan (Berwick) by horseback when a party of Indians concealed behind a large rock with bushes stuck into the ground before it fired on the party, killing Major Frost and Dennis Downing and mortally wounding Mrs. Heard. John Heard attempted to put her back on the horse but she begged him to ride for his life and save the others in the family. Returning with reenforcements, the men brought home the bodies and buried Major Frost on his farm. That night the Indians disinterred the body of Major Frost and suspended it from a stake atop a nearby hill which now bears the name of Frost Hill. Around this stake the Indians performed a dance. The shouts of the braves were heard at the garrison and the men came out and repulsed the Indians, recovering the body which they reburied. This time the large doorstep was placed over Major Frost's grave and the Indians fearing that it was a trap never molested it afterwards. In later years the family had a Welshman come from Portsmouth and carve the inscription on the stone as well as the fleur-de-lis in the corners:

HERE lyeth Interred ye body of mj Charles Frost aged 65 years Deed July ye 4th
1697

A funeral sermon preached on the death of Major Charles Frost by the Rev. Jeremiah Wise of Quamphegan was published. Major Frost's blood is said to have been the last English blood shed in New England in King William's War; the Treaty of Ryswick closing the war was signed on Sept. 11, 1697.

In 1897 the Eliot Historical Society held memorial exercises commemorating the death of Major Frost and inserted in Ambush Rock a tablet which reads:

Ambush Rock
Major Charles Frost
Mrs. John Heard, Dennis Downing killed by the Indians on this spot
July 4, 1697
Marked by Citizens of Eliot
July 4, 1897

A folio published at the time contributes a great deal of valuable information on the family, including speeches made by various members of the family, some early records, and the Hero of Great Hill, the story of Major Frost's death, a poem by Dr. William Hale of Gloucester, Massachusetts.

Major Frost's will, dated Jan. 7, 1690/1 names his wife Mary Bolles. She was given an innholder's license in 1698, the year following her husband's death. She survived him by seven years but nothing further has been discovered about her other than the date of her death. Major Frost had married before 1664 Mary Bolles (b Aug. 7, 1641; d Nov. 11, 1704), daughter of Joseph and Mary Bolles of Wells, Maine. At the time of this marriage the Frost-Bolles coat-of-arms, now in the possession of Nicholas Frost, Esq., of Laconia, N. H., was painted. It is on parchment and hung in the first garrison house of the Frost family. The ring which belonged to her father, Joseph Bolles of Wells, and has on it the Bolles crest came into the possession of the family at this time. It is now owned by Mrs. Mary Pepperrell Frost Sawyer of Durham, New Hampshire. TheThe Bolles arms displays three boars' heads in gold cups because the family came from Swyneshead, England. For further information on the immediate family of Mary Bolles Frost see Libby's Genealogical Dictionary of Maine and New Hampshire. Her father's home was located opposite the marker of the Storer Garrison House in Wells, Maine, and slightly north of this spot. Her brother moved to New London Con-

(Elliott) Gerrish of Gerrish's Island, Kittery Point, a tract of 2000 acres presented to her mother by her father, Hon. Robert Elliott, as a wedding dowry. The town of Eliot, Maine (formerly spelled Elliot), was named after her grandfather, Hon. Robert Elliott of New Castle, N. H. On Sept. 8, 1730, Col. John Frost purchased Stony Brook Farm in Kittery (now Eliot) from his father for £1000 and lived there. He built a home there in 1732, a small garrison in 1734, and a large garrison in 1738. This was the second house to be erected there on property which the family had held since 1660. He fought in the French and Indian Wars and died in 1768. His will was dated Mar. 11, 1768–July 11, 1768.

CHARLES FROST, b Aug. 27, 1710; m (1) Sarah ———, (2) pub. Sept. 17, 1738, Joanna Jackson (b June 14, 1716; d Jan. 7, 1796), daughter of Dr. George and Joanna (Pepperrell) Jackson of Kittery Point, Maine, and niece of Sir William Pepperrell of Kittery Point. He came to Westbrook as a clerk in the employ of Col. Thomas Westbrook and soon became manager of the large landed interests of Westbrook and Waldo. At Stroudwater (now Portland), he built a two-story gambel roof house called Frost's Garrison, to which a third story was added by Dexter Brewer. His widow kept the house as an inn after his death. It was burned Jan. 30, 1882, but a picture of it may be found in Quinby's New England Family History, vol. I.

"The gem of the house was the hall, which was fine and spacious, being composed on one side of panelling from floor to ceiling of the broad finishing boards so lavishly used in those early days. A heavy door of the same style opened in summer on a charming landscape of green fields, graceful elms and the tidal Fore River. A wide staircase with alternate twisted and fluted balusters with square landings, led to the floor above. The larger part of the walls above and below were of plaster ornamented in after years with restful landscapes by the deft fingers of Charles Codman, one of Portland's most gifted artists." (Mrs. J. E. Quinby, Portland Press Herald, Sept. 7, 1895.)

He received power of attorney to act for Westbrook. He was a member of the Court of Sessions, Justice of the Peace, Selectman for two years, and Representative to the General Court in 1755. On June 10, 1746, an Indian was fired on three times from his garrison. For further interesting details on this branch of the family see the Deering News, Jan. 18-Mar. 28, 1896. He died Jan. 4, 1756.

He sketched in the evenings, studying for a while under Thomas Eakins at the Philadelphia Academy of Fine Arts. He first illustrated Out of the Hurly Burly (1874). In 1875 he was on the staff of the New York Graphic. In 1876 A. B. Frost entered the studio of Harper Brothers and from then on was employed constantly, soon becoming the foremost illustrator of his time and one of the foremost illustrators America has produced. His greatest talent lay in his American folk pictures, and particularly in his hunting scenes. In 1877 he went to London to work and study. He published Stuff and Nonsense, New York, 1884 and 1888, The Bull Calf and Other Tales, New York, 1892 and 1924, Sports and Games in the Open, New York and London, 1899, Book of Drawings, New York, 1904, and Carlo, New York, 1913. He made the illustrations for the famous Uncle Remus series. Two of his pictures were hung in the Paris Exhibition of 1904. He lived on a farm at Covent Station, New Jersey, until 1908, when he moved to Paris in order that his sons might have thorough education in art. He returned in 1916, living in New Jersey and Pennsylvania until 1924, when he moved to Pasadena, California, where he died June 22, 1928. For further information regarding his life see the biography: A. B. Frost. The American Sportsman's Artist, by Henry W. Lanier, The Derrydale Press, New York.

When his parents refused their consent to his entering the Navy as a midshipman during the Civil War, Lewis ran away from Malden, going to Washington where he went directly to President Lincoln, who wrote a note to the Secretary of the Navy: "This boy says he must get in the Naval Academy and I think he must. If possible have the Secretary of the Navy do something for him. His name is Lewis W. Frost. March 26, 1862. (Signed) A. Lincoln." When the Secretary of the Navy told him there were a hundred ahead of him Frost returned to Lincoln and together they went to the Secretary, who said that entrance was impossible. Lincoln then had a law passed allowing the President to appoint six midshipmen at large. On the reverse of the card Lincoln wrote: "If it turns out as this boy says, that a law is to pass giving me the appointment of 6 midshipmen at large and Honorable Mr. Hooper will come to me and request it, I will nominate him, this boy, as one of them. A. Lincoln. June 11, 1862." Lewis Frost was the first midshipman appointed by the president under this law. After the Civil War, Lewis Frost graduated from the Columbia University College of Law and became a very successful patent lawyer in New York. With his brothers Lewis Frost commenced a business in veneer, a process invented by his father-in-law.
